As I think back on my first full year with Cultivate KC, I am grateful to the staff, board, supporters, and farmers who welcomed me with open arms. As an outsider from another community, I started during the height of the pandemic when most encounters still happened through a computer screen. But, seasons change, the needs of working farms wait for no virus, and we push forward with flexibility at every turn.

Our premier educational event, the Annual Farmers & Friends Meeting, was virtually attended by a few hundred people from our community and around the country. Our Dig In! fundraiser transformed into a drive-through picnic basket experience bursting with local food prepared by the finest chefs in Kansas City. While we missed dining with everyone in person, we still felt your support for our work and for the farmers in our community who need you now more than ever.

The farmers markets we work with through the Double Up Food Bucks program saw record attendance and program usage. We are humbled by the role this program played in extending the food budgets for households that were experiencing hardship exacerbated by the circumstances of the last two years. One wishes that it didn’t take a global crisis for lawmakers to invest more heavily in food insecurity, but perhaps some lessons will be learned.

Likewise, we saw a year of unprecedented need for refugee assistance. U.S. arrivals from Afghanistan and Haiti represent a small portion of the worldwide migration related to climate change and political turmoil. Our New Roots for Refugees program continues to be a path towards economic security for families resettled in our area. CSA sales reached an all-time high in 2021, and we heard from many supporters who continued to seek out New Roots growers at farmers markets.

Westport Commons Farm took clearer shape with the installation of a beautiful new high tunnel that will allow us to grow more produce and offer season extension techniques and education to local growers. In 2021, we laid the groundwork for our current capital campaign to add more improvements and services to the site.

Lastly, I highlight our Metro Farms and Food Systems team. Cultivate KC’s commitment to providing resources, training and funding to urban farmers has been core to our mission since our inception. The Get Growing Mini Grant program received more applications than any other year, and we offered one-on-one assistance to growers using these funds to improve food production and safety at their farms. We also focused on providing strategies, supplies and technical assistance to farmers experiencing the impact of a changing climate. This work, too, continues into this year as we extend these opportunities to our populations for whom English is not a first language.

Thank you for your support in 2021 and your interest in supporting urban farmers, the local food economy, and programs that extend local food access to all populations. We have some exciting things in store for 2022, and we can’t make it happen without you!

Brien Darby, Executive Director
In 2021 through Cultivate KC’s Food Access Programs, more than 4,200 families, seniors, and individuals in the greater metro area were able to access fresh fruits and vegetables from over 238 local farmers and growers in Kansas and Missouri.

Our expanded outreach efforts along with historic increases in SNAP benefits helped lead Double Up Food Bucks distribution and redemption to an all-time high in the KC area.

Cultivate KC Coupons provided 298 seniors with $7,144 in farmers markets coupons to purchase more fresh fruits and vegetables.

We added two new programs to help people secure fresh fruits and vegetables amidst the continuing pandemic and economic crisis. In partnership with Whole Foods, we administered the Nourishing our Neighborhoods Program that provided 800 SNAP beneficiaries with reusable bags of shelf-stable ingredients and recipes to cook healthy meals at home. We also coordinated the purchase and distribution of 100 produce shares to seniors at Don Bosco Senior Center and Shepherd’s Center for Thanksgiving.
2021 was the 14th growing season of the New Roots for Refugees program at Juniper Gardens Training Farm, managed in partnership with Catholic Charities of Northeast Kansas. As the pandemic continued, we pre-recorded 12 farm classes into 4 languages groups for online viewing. In the Spring, we were able to begin meeting outdoors on-farm for training and quickly realized how much more effective in-person and hands-on teaching was for the farmers.

- 13 farm families in training at Juniper Gardens
- 3 graduate farmers leasing land on-site
- 10 community gardeners on-site
- 31 graduate farmers still growing in the Kansas City region

Staff conducted 97 field walks with farmers, meeting with first year farmers weekly, second and third year farmers bi-weekly, and fourth year farmers once a month. Field walks were a great time to observe and answer farmers’ questions or concerns. We also offered support to farmers by simply helping them with a project or task in their plot.

We continued to increase the services we offer to program graduates— including support and guidance navigating and implementing Get Farming Mini Grants and USDA EQIP grants for farm infrastructure improvements.

In November New Roots was awarded a 3 year SARE grant to improve training, add new classes, collaborate with regional and national educators, and focus on climate resilience among non-native speaking farmers through education and hands-on demonstrations. We look forward to this project to improve the services we provide growers.
In 2021, Cultivate KC’s Metro Farms & Food Systems continued developing urban farms and community-based food projects by providing educational opportunities and technical assistance, strengthening the urban farmers' network, helping growers access resources and grants, and advocating for policy and systems change.

Key collaborative projects in 2021:

Worked with the Greater Kansas City Food Policy Coalition’s Urban Farm Zoning and Planning Task Force to publish From the Ground Up, a report for urban planners, city staff, urban farmers, and advocates to use to address the biggest barriers to urban agriculture.

Collaborated with West Central Missouri Community Action Agency to create videos about scaling up to wholesale production for beginning farmers.

Served on the Growing Growers Organizing Committee and Advisory Board.

6 Get Farming Mini Grants awarded totaling $19,500 for infrastructure and equipment to help local farmers expand and improve operations.

5 KC Grow grants for expanded water access for KCMO farmers.

Support & buildout of 3 high tunnels 1 washstand

3 bulk supply orders placed 118 order participants $14,000 estimated savings for local growers
In 2021, we hosted public education and outreach events in each season of the year, closely related to the activity at our Westport Commons Farm. Throughout the season, we welcomed individual, corporate and school volunteers who logged a total of 1,375 hours of service.

SUMMER

WCF hosted 10 bi-weekly farm stands with participation from New Roots for Refugees farmers.

We held our Eat This: Local Food Challenge campaign to challenge local food consumers to become more engaged and thoughtful about what, where and from whom they purchase their food.

WINTER

150+ attendees at our Annual Farmers & Friends Meeting featuring Leah Penniman of Soulfire Farm.

30+ attendees at Urban Soils workshop.

30+ attendees at the Farm Tax Considerations workshop.

FALL

6 school groups from neighborhood middle and high schools joined us for on-farm service learning.

We hosted the annual membership meeting of the KC Food Hub.

Produce grown at the Westport Commons Farm, often with help of volunteers, was distributed through the New Roots CSA program and the KC Food Hub, supplied the farm stands at Westport Commons, and was donated to several food pantries in the Midtown area. In 2021, we harvested 1,621 lbs of food.
